

Jacqueline Pons-Bunney, Esq.

Jacqueline is Managing Partner and Owner of W&D Law, LLP. She is licensed in California, Arizona, Colorado and Texas. She opened the firm's Arizona office in 2008 and the firm's Colorado office in 2021. Her undergraduate degree in Architecture affords her unique insight and advantage in dealing with adversaries and understanding the design and construction process. This unique background also allows her to meet the needs and concerns of her clients because she understands the industry literally from the ground up.

Jacqueline's litigation experience includes matters ranging from simple fee disputes to multi-million-dollar, high-profile construction cases involving high-rise condominiums, resorts, residences, schools, highways, wastewater treatment facilities, and other large public and private projects. Claims encompass defects, delay and cost overruns, personal/catastrophic injury and wrongful death in a variety of project types. Additionally, she counsels her clients in negotiation of complex contracts, as well as complicated risk management issues. She has authored several articles on risk management and has presented seminars to numerous groups in the construction and insurance community. She has also served as Program Project Manager, assisting design teams in navigating through a multitude of issues potentially impacting claims and coverage.

Peter Stacy, Esq.

Peter is a partner at W&D Law, LLP. He practices in the areas of general business transactions, professional and commercial litigation, complex contracts, business formation and planning, ownership transitions, employment, franchise law, and intellectual property protection, and real estate. Peter currently serves as outside general counsel to a number of small to medium size firms and companies. He began his legal career in complex business litigation before expanding his practice to provide "full service" legal counseling to clients. This broad range of both litigation and transactional experience gives him a particular advantage in counseling business clients from start to finish.

Peter spends the majority of his time on transactional matters including but not limited to the following: Complex development agreement, IPD contracts, land acquisitions, ranch law and related matters. Specifically, Mr. Stacy has drafted and negotiated complex contracts concerning multi-million-dollar casinos, resorts, mixed-use developments and multi-family subdivisions. He has spearheaded a number of private placement investments deals and acquisitions in varied industries.

Martha Bringard, Esq.

Martha is a senior attorney at W&D Law, LLP. She is experienced in representing design professionals in both litigation and transactional matters. Martha has experience in all aspects of litigation, including mediation, arbitrations, and trials, in matters ranging from simple fee disputes and personal injury cases to complex construction defect, delay, and cost overrun claims involving condominiums, commercial properties, residences, hospitals, and schools.

Leila Sadeghi, Esq.

Leila is a senior attorney at W&D Law, LLP. She brings comprehensive litigation and transactional experience. Her experience includes litigating professional liability, personal injury, product liability, malpractice and business litigation claims on behalf of design professionals, product manufacturers, property owners, attorneys, public entities, and various business entities.

It is important for architects to recognize the traps and pitfalls in their practice to avoid legal difficulties. Instead, as architects you can increase profits by focusing on the business of architecture.

Small firms and sole proprietors with many questions but limited resources often wish for a convenient and cost-effective way to get the risk management assistance that they need to make important decisions. LegalLine™ is an AIA Trust member benefit service that offers members access to qualified professionals who can help identify and manage risks while minimizing claims—whether dealing with clients, contractors, employees, or others.

Small architecture firms encounter many challenges similar to those of large firms. These challenges arise when negotiating and interpreting contracts, handling disputes with clients and contractors, and a myriad of other circumstances where risk management guidance and practical information may be needed.

“Ultimately, the goal of LegalLine™ is to help firms manage their risks and potentially minimize the impact of claims and lawsuits.”
